Transform to persevere!

Today, decision makers need to be more vigilant of the global political/economic uncertainties and turbulence ahead. Organizations worldwide will be affected by a declining growth of China and India, the mounting sovereign debt problems in the Euro Zone and a sluggish US and Japanese economy. How can public institutions and private enterprises transform to remain relevant and competitive?

Singapore with limited natural resources and manpower is highly dependent on international trade and will not be spared of the global economic woes. Moreover, the Republic is facing many new challenges of its own such as an aging population, a widening income gap and a more demanding general public. We need transformational leaders with exceptional business wisdom and courage to lead and navigate their organizations through the difficult times ahead.

The Centre for Strategic Leadership and NUS MBA Alumni are very pleased to welcome back three distinguished chief executives, NUS’s own breed of acclaimed MBA alumni. They will share their corporate transformation experiences and how such initiatives have made a positive impact on their organisations.
