

Antecedents and consequences of symbolic responses to institutional change

Sangchan Park

Business groups that have earned an institutionalized status are likely to engage in symbolic action, such as decoupling adoption from implementation. Decoupling that does not entail actual action and usage of resources represents a symbolic responses.

In this study we examine organizational and contextual sources of variations in symbolic responses.