

Corporate governance systems of firms in emerging economies

Luh-Luh Lan

Benard Yeung

We are interested in understanding effective corporate governance system of firms in emerging economies. Corporate governance system refers to various mechanisms to oversee firms' activities including board of directors. Sometimes, labour union and consumers themselves can function as important elements for governance system. We are interested in various governance mechanisms in the emerging market firms and their effectiveness by linking firm performances with governance systems. We are interested in not only publicly listed firms but also private enterprises with family ownership.