

Congratulations to Prof Lawrence Loh on Winning the NUS Annual Teaching Excellence Award

The NUS Centre for Governance and Sustainability congratulates its Director Prof Lawrence Loh for winning the coveted NUS's Annual Teaching Excellence Award \(ATEA\). Having obtained this university-level award third time in a row, Prof Loh has been placed on the ATEA Honour Roll which signifies sustained excellence in teaching.

The ATEA recognises achievements in teaching, instruction, educational design, assessment and feedback as well as the wider adoption of good practices in these areas of leadership and support of other colleagues. It cherishes those whose teaching and use of technology in innovative ways have contributed to learning and a culture that values teaching.

“I am deeply honoured to have received an award that celebrates excellence in teaching and high levels of positive educational impact. It acknowledges the hard work put in to make lessons engaging and relevant to the contemporary real world context. I will always strive to push students beyond what they think they are capable of, challenge their critical thinking and enhance the learning experience that leads to their growth,” said Prof Loh.

Let's all congratulate Prof Loh for this momentous feat!
