Bio

Craig Brown is an assistant professor of finance at NUS Business School. His fields are financial economics, applied microeconometrics, international finance, and political economy. Professor Brown’s current research interests include financial analysts, behavioral finance, investments in marketable securities by non-financial corporations, business groups, the intersection of politics and finance, government financial management, and the economics of government leadership. His research appears in The Quarterly Journal of Economics and The Review of Financial Studies. Professor Brown holds a BA in economics from Rutgers University, in addition to a PhD in finance from the University of Michigan. He lives in Singapore and plays golf and tennis when he is not conducting research and teaching his international finance course at the National University of Singapore.